fore compound is the one remedy which he prefers above all others. "Of course," he said, "I do not want to be understood to assert that I would recommend this preparation to persons coming to me with a prescription, for him that he is always to be found behind his prescription counter except at such hours as he devotes to meals and sleep. Mr. Marsh is one of the best judges of the value of medicine in the city of New York. Concerning Paine's celery compound he says: "This remedy is the greatest of them all. I think that a blessing was bestowed upon mankind when Paine's celery compound was discovered. I hear everybody speak well of it. Those who buy it once buy it again, and they all say that it does them a world of good. I have had weak and nervous people ask me for the goods, and they have told me afterwards that they were benefited immeasurably. I know as a matter of fact that Paine's celery compound is one of the greatest sellers ever placed upon the market. It will always sell. It has come to stay and is highly thought of by everybody. I freely recommend it to the public."

MAX CZINER, Webster avenue, near Southern Boulevard, says:

"I know of no remedy which is in such constant demand as Paine's celery compound. If for no other reason I am compelled to keep it in stock because seldom a day passes but that it is asked for by one of my customers. This in itself is a strong recommendation for the remedy, and I presume that the general public will regard it as such."

F. H. FISCHER, White Plains and Eighth avenues, Williamsbridge, says:

"I have always kept in stock Paine's celery compound, and I find that it is demanded not only in the Spring, but in the Fall. It is a standard remedy which knows neither season nor fall. In other words, it is a remedy which is demanded all the year round, and gives absolute satisfaction to such customers as have spoken to me about it."

DRUGGIST JOHN SIDLEY, Ninety-fourth street and Columbus avenue, says:

"I know that Paine's celery compound is proving a very efficient remedy. All the druggists are selling a great amount of it. If they are really doing as well as I am with it there need be no room for objection. I wish I had control of such a beneficial remedy. We all know the immense value as a fessed that he had overworked and overworn himself and that he had a feeling in his head which suggested to him the idea that his brain had consolidated. He feared that he would soon be incapable of reasonable thought. On the street, in the railway cars and while talking to his wife and children he declared he was guilty of a sort of double consciousness—one of the subject matter in hand, the other that he would suddenly burst into a state of lunacy and possibly become violent.

"I immediately advised this man to use Paine's celery compound. I told him that his ailment was that of thousands of others and that it would prove serious if he would take timely advice. He used one bottle and came back for more. The first bottle, he said, cured him, but he declared he would never again be without the medicine in reach. Paine's celery compound has done a world of good to many, many persons in a condition similar to this man's. It is a magnificent medicine and I sell lots of it."

Mr. James is a highly reputable pharmacist, and as such is widely known.

JAMES H. JONES, Fordham Pharmacy, says:

"At my place of business I always keep a large supply of Paine's celery compound in stock because there is always a demand for it. This demand appears to increase, not radically, but steadily and logically. From this you may draw your own conclusions."

JAMES H. JONES, Third avenue and One Hundred and Ninetieth street, says:

"The demand in this neighborhood for Paine's celery compound has never lessened, but has always increased. It appears to be regarded among my customers as a standard remedy, for the reason that it is never in desultory demand. I invariably keep a large stock on hand."

F. W. SCHOONMAKER, Forty-second street and Park avenue, says:

"It is truly wonderful how many people come in here to testify to the good they have derived from Paine's celery compound. Without solicitation on an average a half dozen of our customers tell us each day that Paine's celery compound has worked wonders with them. Besides these regular customers we have many more of the transient class who drop in to buy the goods. Of course, in our location, directly opposite the Grand Central Depot—we have a wide range for observation. We have patrons from all cities of the country and from all quar-

of the world. There is no standard remedy on the market for which there is a greater demand than there is for the compound. Most retail druggists have remedies of their own preparation, and are therefore loath to recommend any others, but my experience has been that they must all admit that Paine's celery compound appears, from its sales, at all events, steadily growing in popular favor. Certain it is that my sales are ever on the increase, and I know personally of many regular users of the remedy."

GEORGE F. DANIELS, Kingsbridge road and Marion avenue, says:

"My experience since I have been located in this section of the city has been that Paine's celery compound has proved an article of exceptional value. Many people in my neighborhood call for it time and time again. This, it seems to me, is a greater recommendation than any which I might myself offer."

DRUGGISTS F. T. DALL & CO., Seventy-eighth street and Columbus avenue, say:

"We are very well satisfied with Paine's celery compound. Our sales of it are very encouraging. It is a splendid leader. The people seem to get a great deal of benefit out of it, and there is pleasure on all sides while this great medicine is in existence. Long life to it."

THE FIRST AVENUE PHARMACY, No. 508 First avenue, says:

"Paine's celery compound is an article which we have always kept in stock, but really I can say no more for its virtues other than that there is always a demand for it. This demand is never ceasing. This fact in itself may be taken as a more eulogistic sentiment than anything I could say personally."

DRUGGIST J. F. COMERFORD, One Hundred and Fifth street and Columbus avenue, says:

"I have heavy sales of Paine's celery compound all the year round. It goes like hot cakes. I am very particular not to run short of supply, and for this reason always keep a big stock in my store. That the sale is increasing there can be no doubt. Persons in all walks of life buy it and afterward are warm in its praises. It is the best card fore we like it and recommend it. It is a pure, substantial medicine, and as such we will always sell it, make money for ourselves and render the purchasers "it happy."

F. N. FERRY, No. 705 Tremont avenue, opposite Harlem station, New York City, says:

"We have always handled Paine's celery compound and have found it to rattle for which there is a considerable ending demand. I have had that people who have called once have called for it a second

THE LONGACRE PHARMACY, corner Forty-third street and Broadway.

Strollers on the Rialto, actors and actresses in all conditions, know of the Longacre Pharmacy, at the northwest corner of Forty-third street and Broadway.

The Longacre Pharmacy Company comprises a corps of the best graduated druggists in New York. Being members of the theatrical profession, this prominent store is patronized by persons in quarters of the city to it, and has a neighborhood line of custom second to none in New York. The company members are the apothecaries to the Manhattan Eye and Ear Hospital, the Samaritan Hospital and the Actors' Fund of America. For the accommodation of these and other regular patrons the store is kept open all night. "I am able to judge very thoroughly of the merits of Paine's celery compound," said the manager, "because we have a patronage which calls for a nerve strengthener, and a general recuperator. Above all other preparations I advise the use of Paine's celery compound. I cannot make a mistake in this because I know the remedy to be of such a beneficial nature. However, my recommendation is quite unnecessary of late. People demand it, and independent of our own good opinion of the compound, we would be obliged to keep a large stock on hand anyhow. I am very much pleased to be able to say a good word for Paine's celery compound. Our sales are increasing daily. With the advent of Spring the demand has greatly increased. Where we bought dozens of bottles during the Winter we are laying them in by the gross now. We are old every day that Paine's celery compound is the greatest of remedies."

J. JAMES J. ALEXANDER, One Hundred and Twentieth street and Park avenue, and One Hundred and Twenty-eighth street and Eighth avenue.

James J. Alexander's place, at One Hundred and Twenty-eighth street and Eighth avenue, has attached to it possibly the largest show window of any drug store in the city of New York. Dr. Alexander has another store at One Hundred and Twentieth street that would be violating the rules of medical ethics and common sense. The physician knows more about his patient than I do, but when a person applies for a nerve restorer, a liver regenerator or a general tonic for the constitution I do not hesitate in giving him Paine's celery compound. Those to whom I give it always come back for the second bottle. My sales of Paine's celery compound are on the increase. I think the general sale of the goods will be enormous."

remedy there is in the celery vegetable, but none of us knows just how to prepare it like the Paine Celery Compound Company. Every one praises the preparation it puts upon the market."

DRUGGIST FREDERICK K. JAMES, Forty-fourth street and Eighth avenue, says:

"I do not know whether Paine's celery compound is capable of curing incipient paresis, but after considerable experience with the remedy I am inclined to think that it is. I am sure it is a preventive of that dreadful malady. I have had persons come to me whom I knew were on the verge of paresis and who would have surely been the victims of it had they not taken a heroic remedy. The mistake people usually make when they are in a highly nervous state is to resort to alcoholic stimulants. If they only tried Paine's celery compound they would be relieved and not experience that awful depression which a false invigorator like alcohol causes. Paine's celery compound braces up the system not only for the time being but for good. It has had many a careworn business man out of the sloughs of despond and caused him to take a new view of life and inevitable misfortunes. A short time ago a customer came to me and said that he thought he was gradually losing his mind. He con-ters of the globe, and perhaps more of them than any other drug store in the country. The clamor for Paine's celery compound among these people is something remarkable in the extreme. It is life and strength, apparently, to them. They are all ardent in their praises of it."

DRUGGISTS GETTY & JAMES, One Hundred and Thirtieth street and Columbus avenue, say:

"We dispose of Paine's celery compound regularly the year round. It has become a staple article in our store. It is necessary for us to carry it because of the demand for it made by our customers. While we are sure the sale never has decreased, we are inclined to think that we have been selling more of it recently than ever before. The people like it because it builds them up. As long as this remedy is made we will be glad to handle it."

DRUGGIST OTTO FROHWEIN, Ninety-first street and Third avenue, says:

"I will say to you frankly that Paine's celery compound is a good seller and a good thing for my trade. It is sought for from every quarter. All druggists must keep it because there is such a cry for it. The people clamor for it. That it does a world of good there can be no doubt. It would not

MAX NITZCHE, No. 560 First avenue, says:

"I have been proprietor of this store for something over a year, and when I took possession I well recall that my predecessor spoke to me of the remarkable selling qualities of Paine's celery compound. I have since learned that what he said was true in every sense we have. I am sure we will sell any quantity of it this Spring and Summer. I heartily recommend Paine's celery compound."

A. VIOL, No. 1294 Washington avenue, corner One Hundred and Sixty-ninth street, says:

"There is no remedy which I have more call for than Paine's celery compound, and that is considered by many as sufficient recommendation. I have calls for it every day in the week throughout the year, and that is considerably more than can be said of many other medicines which I keep in stock."

A. & R. BOEDER, White Plains avenue, between First street and Jerome avenue, say:

"We can cheerfully say that Paine's celery compound is the best proprietary seller on the market. We have noticed that those who purchase it once often return to purchase it more."
